Growing awareness of cervical cancer: Nancy

LABUAN: The increase in the number of women undergoing the human papillomavirus deoxyribonucleic acid (HPV DNA) test across the nation signals a heightened awareness among them regarding early detection and preventive measures of cervical cancer.

Women, Family and Community Development Minister Datuk Seri Nancy Shukri said between 2019 and 2023, a total of 112,524 people underwent the HPV DNA tests, with Sarawak leading the figures at 23,744, followed by Sabah (12,778) and Kuala Lumpur (10,932).

"The data reveals a notable increase in women undergoing the test, underscoring the success of cervical cancer screening programmes nationwide.

"We are witnessing more women stepping forward for early detection and preventive measures," she told reporters after launching the Labuan Kasih KPWKM: Gempur Saringan HPV DNA 2024 programme in conjunction with National Cervical Cancer Awareness Month at Desa Tunas Hijau, here, Saturday.

Nancy said the National Population and Family Development Board (LPPKN) had introduced the Women's Reproductive Cancer Awareness Campaign (WCaRe), aimed at promoting early cancer screening programmes, including the Cervical Cancer Screening Programme (HPV/DNA Test) and the Mammogram Subsidy Programme.

Nancy said the Ministry was targeting 57,000 women to benefit from the WCaRe campaign this year.

Operating 50 Nur Sejahtera Clinics nationwide, LPPKN has three clinics in Sabah, with the clinic in Tawau scheduled to commence operations on Feb 1, she said.

"In private hospitals, the cost of an HPV/DNA test ranges between RM300 and RM500," she said.

She said the Kasih KPWKM: Gempur Saringan HPV DNA programme would benefit 500 women in Labuan through free cervical cancer screening.

Tackling child marriages in absence of a ban

Published on: Sunday, January 21, 2024
By: Jachintha Joyce

To date, accurate statistics on child marriages in Malaysia remain elusive due to the absence of a centralised database, exacerbated by the sensitivity of the topic and the prevalence of undocumented cases.

While there has been a global decline in child marriages in recent years, this deeply ingrained and widespread practice continues to persist, flagrantly violating human rights and standing as a significant moral blight, tarnishing the very societal fabric.

Despite global attempts to eradicate this practice, millions of young girls find themselves thrown into child marriages, perhaps willingly or unwillingly, often with significantly older spouses.

As reported by the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), approximately 640 million girls and women currently alive experienced childhood marriage, with one in five young women aged 20 to 24 married as children, compared to nearly one in four a decade ago globally ("Is an end to the child marriage within reach?", UNICEF, 2023).

According to the then deputy minister of the Ministry of Women, Family and Community Development (MWFCDD), Hannah Yeoh, from 2007 until 2017, there were 14,999 cases of child marriages, with 10,000 occurring within the Malay-Muslim community.

In addition, in 2020 it was reported that 445 students dropped out of secondary school due to marriage.

As reported, approximately 1,500 children were married off each year (between 2007 to 2019) and 90pc of them were girls. A recent parliament session highlighted a positive decline in child marriages, with a 19pc decrease reported—from 1,354 cases in 2020 to 1,086 cases in 2021.

To date, accurate statistics on child marriages in Malaysia remain elusive due to the absence of a centralised database, exacerbated by the sensitivity of the topic and the prevalence of undocumented cases.

A meta-analytical study by Kohno et al. (2020) found evidence that among the major reasons for child marriages are poverty, human insecurity, family conflicts, inadequate legal protection for victims, victims lack of knowledge on child marriage, cultural and religious values, influence of the patriarchal influence, etc.

Consistently, data collected by the Department of Shariah Judiciary Malaysia (JKSM) in 2018 indicates, there was a high prevalence of child marriages in Sarawak (974 cases), Kelantan (877 cases) and Sabah (848 cases).

The total ban on child marriages is contested, particularly in these states that also persistently experience high levels of poverty.

Child marriage often occurs covertly, leaving the child as a silent victim. Public awareness about this phenomenon only rises when the media spotlights specific incidents. The following are a few instances of the tabloid-worthy mentions of child marriage in Malaysia.

- An 11-year-old Thai girl who had become the third wife of a 41-year-old Kelantanese rubber trader, as the man promised a comfortable life to the child's parents while his second wife revealed he provides insufficient financial support to the family;
- A 15-year-old girl, who had become the second wife of a 44-year-old Kelantanese People's Volunteer Corp (Rela) member. The child had 13 siblings and due to poverty, her parents had married her off.

Interestingly, both instances share a commonality: they both occurred in the state of Kelantan.

Furthermore, as recently reported, Kelantan recorded 533 registered underage marriages in the past four years.

Could this imply that there is an inadvertent endorsement of immoral human rights practices in the state?

The Malaysian Child Act 2001 [Act 611] defines a "child" as an individual who is below eighteen years old. While federal involvement in the state jurisdiction is limited, the federal government should be a signatory of the "Convention on the Rights of the Child", 1989, to reduce the prevalence of child marriages as a child is accorded protection under:

- Article 6 - Ensuring survival, well-being, and growth;
- Article 19 - Safeguarding against violence, abuse, and exploitation;
- Article 24 - The child has the right to optimal healthcare, emphasising primary care and preventive measure;
- Article 28 - The child has the right to education, which should be achieved progressively and with a commitment to providing equal opportunities.

In addition, the patriarchal social structure in Malaysia contributes to the high rate of child marriages, which highlights the larger problem of female autonomy in decision-making and participation in the nation.

The fact that child marriage remains "still LEGAL" in Malaysia may have unintended "normalisation" effect on the rape cases. Men who rape young children can escape prosecution and punishment simply by opting to marry the victim as was the case of a 13-year-old girl who was raped by a 40-year-old restaurant manager who then legally married the child.

In another case, a 35-year-old Negeri Sembilan man wed a disabled 14-year-old after he was accused of raping her. The guy then allegedly compelled his wife to record on camera him raping his sister-in-law, who was eleven years old.

Shockingly, Shabudin Yahaya, a Malaysian politician and a former Syariah court judge, opined that the act of a rape victim marrying the perpetrator, viewed as a potential solution to escalating social issues, did not inherently pose a problem.

Implication on the physical, mental and emotional well-being of the child

The study by Susan Mayor indicates that pregnancy and childbirth complications are the leading cause of death in 15-19-year-olds in developing countries, resulting in 70,000 annual deaths.

In addition, these girls face twice the risk of dying from pregnancy-related causes compared to women in their 20s, and their infants face a 50pc higher likelihood of mortality ("Pregnancy and childbirth are leading causes of death in teenage girls in developing countries", National Library for Medicine, May 15, 2006).

Another study by Prof Caroline et al with 22,188 respondents involved found that children whose mothers were 19 years of age or younger had a 20-30pc higher risks for preterm delivery and low birthweight, associating teenage motherhood is detrimental to newborns.

Subsequently, pregnancy and child marriage will have a greater detrimental impact on the mental health of the victim.

For instance, while 6.5pc to 12.9pc of women in high-income countries experience perinatal mental health issues, in developing nations like Malaysia, the rate jumps to 48.5pc ("Rising Concern on Perinatal Mental Healthcare in Malaysia", EMIR Research, 2023).

Hinders education opportunities and personal development of the child

Often overlooked, child marriages might contribute to intergenerational poverty by restricting educational and economic possibilities. Early marriage frequently leads to school dropout, impeding skill development and future employment opportunities for young brides.

According to the Deputy Education Minister, Lim Hui Ying, the dropout rate for female students in Malaysia increased from 0.40pc in 2019 to 0.71pc in 2022, while for male students the rate decreased from 0.72pc in 2019 to 0.29pc in 2022.

Based on the ministry's Student Database Application System from 2019 to 2023, it is found that one of the many reasons was due to marriage.

After marriage, child brides or grooms, but especially the brides, may be prohibited from going to school as typical gender roles are frequently prioritised by societal norms and expectations.

The recent emphasis by the Malaysian government on compulsory secondary education for all is commendable. However, it is crucial to prevent the immoral practice of child marriage from undermining this envisioned brighter future.

- Hence, EMIR Research proposes the following to supplement the current National Strategy Plan in Handling the Causes of Child Marriage (2020-2030):
- There is a need for reliable data and extensive research on the root causes of child marriages and mitigation pathways.

Beyond merely compiling data on the incidence of child marriages by local and state governments, there is a crucial need to establish a centralised and systematic database of detailed case studies—a crucial resource for developing workable strategies towards the eradication of child marriages in Malaysia.

Moreover, close collaboration between the Department of Social Welfare (JKMM) and MWFCDD is essential. They should jointly analyse and offer support to victims of child marriages, which includes conducting periodic home visits to evaluate living conditions and standards of living.

It is also vital to inform victims about their rights and legal protections under Malaysian law, especially in cases involving violence.

This collaborative initiative aims to expedite and improve the implementation of solutions for protecting and supporting victims of child marriages while empowering the victims to make their own decisions.

Additionally, creating such a centralised database would facilitate civil society (i.e. activists, think tanks etc.) in conducting thorough research on child marriages, contributing to efforts to eliminate this immoral practice from society.

- Creating decent jobs in rural and sub-urban areas to break the cycle of poverty

Poverty is one of the key drivers of child marriages. Thus, creating employment in industries suitable for our rural communities, such as community-based tourism, handcraft manufacturing, and agricultural entrepreneurship, will empower the family heads and enhance the overall well-being of the family while also providing economic expansion.

In addition to fostering skill development and financial security, such efforts decrease dependence on the immoral and often exploitative practice of child marriage.

- Creating a wide variety of good jobs—especially in industries that complement local resources—can lead to a significant economic uplift in rural and suburban areas, breaking the persistent cycles of poverty.
- Improving access to quality maternal care for pregnant and parenting girls and women

Adequate healthcare empowers young mothers while also minimising health risks and infant mortality. Education and support offered during maternity care raises understanding about reproductive health, stopping the cycle of misinformation.

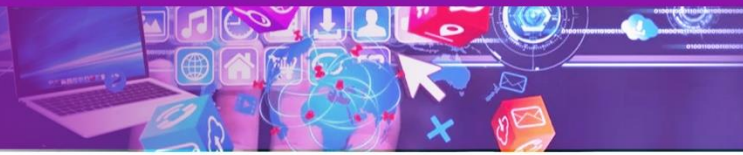

Prioritising maternal care and community support for young mothers' actions and autonomy subverts social norms endorsing child marriage and fosters an environment conducive to healthier futures.

Additionally, emphasising the importance of family planning allows couples to manage family size, promotes economic stability and education, and reduces child marriage likelihood.

It is certain that eradicating child marriages requires reforms in law pertaining to child marriages and the reproductive rights of girls and women. Such a gap in law and policies must be addressed and not overlooked.

After all, the persistent support for child marriages among Malaysian lawmakers and religious leaders reflects same-old identity politics play and misuse of religion but, as we can see from the above analysis, has nothing in common with healthy national development.

GEORGE TOWN: A total of 405 housewives who registered for the Housewives' Social Security Scheme received benefits to the tune of RM1.09 million between December 2022 and December last year.

They were among the 201,383 housewives registered for the scheme between December 2022 and Dec 18, last year.

Human Resources Minister Steven Sim said the highest paid out was for funeral management, totalling RM632,214.55 for 319 cases.

He said this was followed by the "Penakat" pension benefit totalling RM393,142.41 for 228 cases.

"We view the care economy as an integral part of our economy. The care economy is real and should be accorded the same protection and rights as those from the other industries.

"As such, we hope more housewives will register for this scheme to ensure they are well protected. "It is our hope to register 500,000 housewives this year," he said at the Kesuma Madani programme at the Arulmigu Balathandayuthapani Temple in Jalan Air Terjun here yesterday.

The Kesuma Madani programme will be held during the three-day Thaipusam celebration in Penang from Jan 24 to 26. A similar programme was earlier announced for Batu Caves.

Sim said programme was the ministry's outreach strategy to "bring the ministry to the people".

He said various initiatives under the ministry would be introduced, especially to the Indian community, during the religious festival, through a special booth.

Actor assails man for taking upskirt photos

MALAYSIAN deejay and actor Jack Lim (pic) went after a man who took upskirt photos of an actress during an event in Kuala Lumpur, China Press reported.

During the incident on Friday, Lim and his colleagues were attending a Chinese New Year promotional event at a mall in Bukit Jalil.

However, they soon noticed a suspicious man tailing one of the actresses. When they saw him taking upskirt photos of the actress with his handphone, Lim, along with several other colleagues and a food delivery rider, gave chase and apprehended the man.

They found such photos of not only the actress but also of other artistes and several other women at the event.

Lim admitted that he could not restrain himself from beating up the man.

"I confess that I was reckless. I am ready to face the law for raising my hand (against the man)," he said.

Cheras OCPD Asst Comm Zam Halim Jamaluddin later confirmed that a 33-year-old suspect was detained.

The case will be investigated under Section 509 of the Penal Code for insulting the modesty of another person and Section 14 of the Minor Offences Act 1955 for insulting behaviour.

> The daily also reported that a cleaning staff member, who picked up a discarded wallet in the rubbish bin, drove his garbage truck all the way to the owner's house in Pontian, Johor, to return it to him.

According to the owner, he lost the wallet in Pekan Nanas a year ago and was surprised to be reunited with it.

Despite his RM100 cash having gone missing, his identity card, driving licence and debit card were still in the wallet.

Sharing the incident on Facebook, the owner said the cleaning staff member had found the wallet amid the garbage, adding that he was thankful for the man's honesty.

Some urged the owner to make a police report to prevent identity theft.
