KPWKM menerusi LPPKN rangka pelbagai program tingkat kadar kelahiran negara

Nasional - Dicipta: 20 Februari 2025 01:01 PM - Kemas kini: 20 Februari 2025 01:05 PM

Datuk Seri Nancy Shukri

KUALA LUMPUR, 20 Februari– Pelbagai inisiatif dirangka Kementerian Pembangunan Wanita, Keluarga dan Masyarakat (KPWKM) menerusi Lembaga Penduduk dan Pembangunan Keluarga Negara (LPPKN) untuk meningkatkan kadar kelahiran negara.

Menteri Pembangunan Wanita, Keluarga dan Masyarkat Datuk Seri Nancy Shukri berkata LPPKN telah mengadakan program galakan perkahwinan seperti Majlis Resepsi Mahligai Cinta untuk pasangan terpilih.

"Kita juga menawarkan perkhidmatan persekitaran yang boleh membantu pasangan membuat keputusan seperti perkhidmatan perancangan keluarga dan pelaksanaan program pembangunan keluarga menerusi modul Smart Start praperkawhinan," katanya.

Beliau berkata demikian ketika menjawab soalan daripada Ahli Parlimen Permatang Pauh Muhammad Fawwaz Mohamad Jan berkenaan langkah untuk meningkatkan kadar kelahiran negara dan inisiatif dalam menggalakkan rakyat agar menambah bilangan anak.

Nancy juga memaklumkan bahawa modul berkenaan berperanan memberi kemahiran dan pengetahuan kepada pasangan yang bercadang mendirikan rumah tangga.

Total fertility rate in Malaysia has declined since 2013 — Nancy

KUALA LUMPUR: The total fertility rate (TFR) in Malaysia has been on a downward trend since 2013, the Dewan Rakyat was told yesterday.

Women, Family and Community Development Minister Datuk Seri Nancy Shukri highlighted that according to the 2024 ESCAP Population Data Insights, most Asia-Pacific countries now have a TFR below the replacement fertility level of 2.1.

"Over the past 15 years, Malaysia's highest TFR was 2.2 in 2011 and 2012. Since then, we've observed a declining trend.

"However, for the first time during this period, the TFR increased by 0.1 to 1.7 in 2023, up from 1.6 the previous year," she said during the oral question-and-answer session.

She was responding to Muhammad Fawwaz Mohamad Jan (PN-Permatang Pauh) who asked about the ministry's strategies to address the declining birth rate and initiatives to encourage larger families.

Nancy said various factors contribute to Malaysia's declining TFR, including economic challenges, lifestyle choices, delayed marriages, and infertility issues.

She added that the ministry, through the National Population and Family Development Board (LPPKN), is actively implementing initiatives to address this decline.

Among the initiatives are the marriage encouragement programme, family planning services, and fertility-related services. — Bernama

Child labour persists despite high-income ambitions

Expert calls for stronger policies to protect vulnerable children and ensure access to education

PETALING JAYA: While Malaysia aims to become a high-income nation as early as 2028, its labour laws still permit child exploitation, said Child Rights Innovation and Betterment Foundation co-chairperson Srividhya Ganapathy.

"The Children and Young Persons (Employment) Act 1966 allows certain forms of child labour, contradicting Malaysia's commitments to international human rights conventions and socioeconomic progress," she said.

"We ratified the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) in 1995, obliging the government to align national laws with the convention's standards. The UNCRC, alongside Malaysia's Child Act 2001, defines a child as anyone under 18 and guarantees their rights to protection, education and healthcare. Yet outdated labour laws still allow children to work, particularly in agriculture and informal sectors."

Srividhya noted that while the 12th Malaysia Plan focuses on inclusive socioeconomic development, digital economy growth and sustainability, child labour remains legal.

"How can we speak of these goals when our laws still permit child labour?"

She referred to government data from 2018, which estimated that 33,600 children aged five to 17 worked in Malaysia's oil palm sector, with Sabah accounting for 58.8%.

No recent data has been released, raising concerns about transparency and policy effectiveness.

"We have embraced Industry 4.0, yet some of our children, especially those from marginalised communities, are being left behind," she said.

She added that the 1966 Act was introduced when Malaysia was still recovering from colonial rule and war, making it ill-suited for today's digital age.

The law does not apply to Sabah and Sarawak, where separate labour ordinances govern child labour, further complicating nationwide enforcement.

Srividhya also highlighted data from Unesco's Institute of Statistics, which put Malaysia's literacy rate at 94.64%. However, the 2022 Programme for International Student Assessment report showed one of the world's sharpest declines in reading, mathematics and science scores.

"Children forced into work lose their right to education, play and protection. They take on adult roles and are exposed to abuse, neglect and pressures no child should endure," she said.

She acknowledged that for many families, child labour is a matter of survival.

She urged the government to enact the Social Work Profession Bill to improve welfare services and protect vulnerable children.

She also called for a multi-stakeholder working committee to tackle child labour.

"We need collaboration between government agencies, child protection advocates and industry leaders committed to Malaysia's future," she said.

Lim Wei Jun knows the reality of child labour firsthand.

At age 12, he spent his mornings wiping tables and washing dishes at a kopitiam in Kuala Lumpur while his parents ran a small hawker stall nearby.

"They struggled to make ends meet, so I was expected to help," he said.

Lim always longed to study and escape poverty, but his parents prioritised his four younger siblings' education.

Now 30, he works as a kitchen helper in another restaurant in Kuala Lumpur, stuck in the same cycle of low-paying jobs.

"If I had a good education, I could have achieved something better. Maybe I could have become a teacher or worked in an office, but I never had that chance," he said.

Srividhya noted that while the 12th Malaysia Plan focuses on inclusive socioeconomic development, digital economy growth and sustainability, child labour remains legal. – SUNPIC

BUDAK TERCEKIK GULA-GULA MATA

'Doakan anak saya, dia tenat'

Georgetown

"Mohon doakan kesejahteraan anak sulung saya, dia sedang tenat. Semoga ada keajaiban untuknya."

Begitu rayuan Mohamad Fakhruddin Mohamad Fikri, 35, bapa kepada kanak-kanak lelaki Mohamad Fahmi, 10, yang kritikal sejak Selasa lalu dipercayai tercekik gula-gula gummy mata.

Mohamad Fakhruddin berkata, kali terakhir dia dan isteri dapat melihat anaknya di Unit Rawatan Rapi Pediatrik (PICU) Hospital Pulau Pinang (HPP) pada 8.30 pagi tadi dan sudah berjumpa dengan doktor.

Menurutnya, Muhamad Fahmi masih tidak menunjukkan perkembangan dan doktor sedang berusaha merawatnya.

"Doktor beritahu pasukannya sedang berusaha merawat dan jika tiada perkembangan, mereka akan hentikan pemberian ubat bagi melihat perkembangan seterusnya.

"Luluh hati saya, seorang anak yang ceria tiba-tiba dalam keadaan begini. Pada masa ini, kami sekeluarga hanya mampu berdoa dan berserah kepada kuasa Allah SWT.

"Tragedi yang menimpa anak sulung kami amat mengejutkan, kami tiada daya menghalangnya," katanya ketika ditemui di pekarangan HPP bersama isteri, Noraini Mohamad Isa, 37 dan adiknya, Siti Farhanim, 33, semalam.

Mohamad Fakhruddin berkata, sejak anaknya dipindahkan ke PICU HPP dari Hospital Seberang Jaya, dia tidak pulang ke rumah dan tidak berganjak dari ruang menunggu bagi menunggu khabar gembira.

Menurutnya, dia cuba lelap seketika, namun terjaga apabila terdengar seolah-olah Muhamad Fahmi memanggilnya.

"Betul dan jelas kedengaran Muhamad Fahmi panggil saya, 'baba', seketika kemudian baru tersedar ia hanya mimpi atau perasaan saya.

"Kelmarin (Selasa lalu), Muhamad Fahmi beritahu tidak mahu ke Kelas al-Quran dan Fardu Ain (KAFA) kerana keletihan. Saya sangka itu hanya perkara biasa tambahan sesi persekolahan baharu sahaja bermula.

"Sebelum ini, ibunya menghantar ke kelas dan tidak sangka semalam pertemuan akhir kami. Sebelum masuk ke kelas, dia paling muka melihat saya dan pandangan matanya buat saya teringat sampai sekarang," katanya.
